Refugee Airlift By U.S., Russians Planned in India

NEW DELHI, June 11 (UPI).-Government officials said today they hope to get an airlift started next week using American and Russian planes to move East Pakistani war refugees out of crowded different sectors of eastern India, would be part of an overall plan to relocate as many as 2.5 million of the war refugees out of a total of about 5.5 million who have arrived in India so far.

G. S. Kahlen, Secretary for Rehabilitation, said the relocation program would involve construc-tion of up to 50 new camps in areas which have so far received no refugees. In addition to the airlift, train and truck trans-portation will be used, he said.

The American airlift effort, now awaiting final approval from Washington, would involve four Air Force C-130 transport air-creft, which would haul refugees from isolated Tripura territory, ou the eastern frontier of East Pakistan, to Gauhati, a town 200 miles distant on the northeastern bulge of East Pakistan. United States has so committed a total of $17.5 million in aid to the refugee program. Operating costs of the C-130s are expected to take somewhere close to a million dollars of that total.

Five more sirlines joined the Jouth-fare price war yesterday, expanding the competition to five more European countries. U.S. Panel Says U.S. Agency Subsidizes Bias in Housing

On the eve of a presidential policy statement on segregation in suburban housing, the commission delivered a blistering at-tack on the Federal Housing Ad-ministration's operation of a mortgage interest subsidy program designed to help low-income families become home owners.

ministration's housing policy, Mr.

"A municipality that does not want federally assisted housing should not have it imposed from Washington by bureaucratic flat." The statement, more than a year in preparation drew a clear distinction between racial and economic discrimination.

"By equal housing opportunity, I mean the achievement of a condition in which individuals of similar income levels . . . have a like range of housing choices available to them regardless of race, color, religion or national origin," Mr. Nixon said.

Mr. Nixon noted that in some cases, members of minority races prefer to live in neighborhoods where they are in the majority. He added: "It is important to remember that the terms poor and black are not interchangeable."

The Civil Rights Commission announced that Attorney General John N. Mitchell and two other cabinet officers have agreed to testify next week at public hear-ings designed to prod the government into taking strong action to open white suburb to blacks and Chicanos.

The commission's four-day hearing, its first in Washington in nine years, will focus on "foreed regregation of minority groups in ghettos and barries of inner cities and "the consequences to the nation if this pattern is allowed to continue," the com-

Senate Approves Education Bill Of $5.5 Billion

WASHINGTON, June 11 (WP). The Senate passed yesterday, 77 to 0, a $5.5 billion Office of Education appropriation bill. Far more costly than either the House version or the Nixon administration's request, the measure goes next to a Senate-House con-ference where lawmakers will have to resolve differences totaling more than $800 million.

Major Senate floor votes yesterday involved vain efforts to add or subtract funds for socalled "impact sid" to compen-sate school districts serving families living or working at federal installations or living in lowincome public housing.

Sen. Harry F. Byrd jr., Ind., Va., failed in a bid to delete the $600 million recommended by the Senate Appropriations Committee for school districts affected by public housing. This particular form of "impact aid" was authorwo years ago but ha be funded

The Senate-passed measure is more than $450 million above the administration's total education budget request for the fiscal year starting July 1. But the administration request included funds for related programs which Congress has yet to authorize. Thus the Senate bill is more than $900 million above what the administration sought for existing pro-235 program was based on a staff

Administration and Kennedy Reach Cancer-Fight Accord

By Stuart Averbach

A compromise bill hammered out by administration officials and members of Sen. Kennedy's Senate Health subcommittee carries the same identifying number as President Nixon's proposal but maintains the substance of the Kennedy bill.

"The hill is 5-34 (the Kennedy bill) with insignificant amendments," said Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D. Wis., who brought out the hitherto-secret details of the compromise during a routine bearing.

Administration officials, including Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Elliot L. Richardson, said yesterday that they will accept the compromise even though it resembles the Kennedy bill they had opposed so strongly.

"There are very substantial areas of consensus between S-34 and S-1828 (the administration bill)," said Mr. Richardson. Instead of creating an independent national cancer authority as Sen. Kennedy proposed, the compromise sets up an anti-cancer agency that will act independently and yet be a part of the National Institutes of Health. Access to President

As in the Kennedy proposal, the head of the agency will be appointed by the President, will report to him and will submit the budget directly to the White House's Office of Management and Budget instead of going through NIH and HEW.

The compromise omits any mention of a "cancer-cure program," a phrase used in the President's May 11 message on cancer and in the administration's bill, which was sponsored by Sen. Peter Dominick, R., Colo. Under the compromise plan, the President could not delegate his authority over the fight against cancer to the secretary of HEW as he could have in the administration's hill. To indicate the close agreement on the compromise, Mr. Richard-son said an example of the differences is the salary of the director of the anti-cancer agency.

Under one subcommittee proposal, the secretary said at yes-terday's hearing, the agency head would earn more than the director of NIH and the under secre-

Sen, Nelson, opposed to removing cancer research from NIH, was backed at the hearing by Dr. John A. D. Benno C. Schmid, chairman of a national panel of consultants on the conquest of cancer which inded last year that the fight against cancer be intensified and run by the President, said he agreed with the compromise.

The present decree follows the viously required. This ruling is expected to reduce greatly the time and expense involved in obtaining annulments. The case must still go to a second court for appeals but there is no need for retrial as previously.

Father Bidagor did not specify how much time it would take to get an annulment under the new procedure, adding that courts in different countries worked differently. He did say that it would save "considerable time."

Sources close to the Vatican estimated that the new procedure would take from two to three years. In the past, the average would drag on for five to eight years and sometimes as long as 20 years.

An extensive series of medical tests yesterday and early today apparently revealed the men were not suffering any Ill-effects from their prolonged state of weightiessness.

Following their breakfast and regular morning exercise, the cosmonauts took samples of their own blood, ran a set of cardiovascular tests and checked the calcium content in their bones.

The Soviet news agency Tass said the bone tissue experiments were important because weightlessness causes a "washing out" of calcium from the bones.

Tax Program Would Help German Poor

And Squeeze Rich; Cabinet Approves

BONN, June 11 (UPI).-The rich will be squeezed a bit more and the persons with the lowest incomes given additional relief under the terms of tax reforms proposed by the Social Demo-cratic government today. Also, if parliament approves, business lunches will cease to be deductible expenses.

Chancellor Willy Brandt and his cabinet approved the tax re-forms in a marathon three-day meeting.

Because the cut in low-income taxes will reduce revenue, the government also proposed to in-crease the rate of the value-added tax from its present 11 to 12 per-

Karl Schiller, Minister of Economics and Finance, and 17 of his aides explained the reforms at a news conference. Highlights of the measures, which would take effect in 1974:

The top income-tax rate will be raised from 53 to 56 percent. This would be collected on all income above 260,000 marks per year for a married couple.

• Inheritance taxes will be eased in the lower ranges but toughened in the higher brackets. The top tax rate on an inheritance by a wife, child or children of a deceased child will be 30 percent on everything above 100 million marks. Rates can rise to a maximum 70 percent of inheritance by distant relatives or nonrela-

5 Nations Seek Geneva Limits on Bombing, Napalm

GENEVA, June 11 (NYT) .-Experts from five countries have submitted a "working paper" recommending that Geneva conven-tions for the protection of war victims be tightened up to restrict bombing and the use of certain weapons, including rapalm, against civilian populations. The joint submission of these informal suggestions by experts from Mexico, the Netherlands. Sweden, Switzerland and Egypt was disclosed today as the conference ended its unproductive three-week session. No action was taken on the "working paper," which, it is understood, received a cool reception from th: United States.

George W. Aldrich, the head of the U.S. delegation, told corre-spondents that only the conference recommendations regarding increased protection for sick and wounded members of combat forces reached the stage where they are likely to be accepted as the basis for a supplementary agreement, or protocol, to the 1949 conventions.

All other suggestions-there were no formal proposals officially sponsored by governments produced such long debates that the conference, meeting behind closed doors, limited itself to making a list of suggestions and the arguments for and against, Mr. Aldrich sald. Another conference of experts will meet next year.

Wilson Explodes Over Prodding By BBC Interviewer on Earnings

LONDON, June 11 (AP).—Former Prime Minister Harold Wilson and the British Broadcasting Corp. were reported today to have had a row after a television interviewer asked him how much he earned on his memoirs.

British papers, which splashed the story across front pages, said that the BBC had apologized and cut the question out of the taped broadcast.

In the absence of denials, and with the BBC and Mr. Wilson refusing to comment, the newspaper accounts provided the British public with this story:

Mr. Wilson, apparently not forewarned of the question, told interviewer David Dimbleby his earnings were none of Mr. Dimbleby's husiness and suggested that they go on with other questions.

British Antique Dealers' Fair-True Blue Forever?

By Souren Melikian

TONDON, June 11 (DET).—The 31st British Antique Dealers' Fair, which opened yesterday at Grosvenor House, raises many questions. Walking through the many galleries, literally crammed with objects, made me wonder what the aim of such a fair should be. Is the idea to lump together the largest possible number of works of art in one given place and to make sure that not one square inch of costly space is wasted? In that case, the British dealers have made their point. Every wall is lined with pictures, every stand filled with furniture. Very little attention has been paid to display. The lighting was worse than haphazard. In some cases, you literally cannot see the objects.

There were very few exceptions—one heing the magnificent stand of Michel Dumez-Onof, who specializes in Greek and Roman antiquities and medieval or Renaissance objects of character. In striking contrast to most of his colleagues' displays, he has managed to create a slightly dramatic, highly modern atmosphere through sophisticated lighting. This points up the quality of some of the pieces he is showing, such as an unusually good marble torso of the Roman period. Perhaps he made the effort because the pieces he had to show were so good.

Everywhere else, the show had remarkable unity, so remarkable indeed as to he tiresome and monotonous. Never have I seen quite so many mahogany dressing tables, Chippendale "bureau bookcases" and "kneehole" deaks. There was lots of porcelain too, hundreds of jugs and bowls of the 18th and 19th century, with the stress leid on English weres. And if they weren't English they fitted British taste to a tee. As for paintings, there was a surfeit of marines—the Van de Velde man-of-war type and all its possible derivations and variations right up to the late 19th century; then there were tulips coming out of vases and snowy winter landscapes in the Flemish taste for which the English would appear to have developed an inordinate fundness.

Add to all this some glittering silver—George II salvers, Adam suce tureens—and a good many Chinese pots and you get a fair picture of the fair as it looks to the observer, interested in art-forart rather than in art as a buver.

Country House

The overall impression was the one you get in almost any espectable English country house owned by the same family for 200 years or so. The fair was much the same last year, but this year the trend toward this sort of thing is more marked.

It would be unfair to say that there was nothing out of the ordinary. Bluett's had a few stunning Chinese celadon bowls of the Northern Sun period, and Hugh Moss had produced some Kang-Hsi bowls in underglazed copper red and some Tang ewers that were very good. Here and there, one came across 2 few other rare objects: A 16th-century Belgian font from Antwerp (1526) at S.J. Phillips's stand; a magnificent Louis XIV table de changeur in the Boulle manner at William Redford's stand; a large and rare Roman marble mask of the second century A.D. at Michel Dumez-Onof'e stand.

However, these sorts of works were virtually unnoticeable among so many traditional items. One came away with the impression that Great Britain wanted to see its own image repeated over and over

Prime Minister Edward Heath's appearance at the fair, and his brief impromptu speech, rather strengthened the feeling. The prime minister congratulated the audience pleasantly ("At Grosvenor House, we have the hallmark of anthenticity") and referred to his own interest in the field of collecting. He himself is known to go in for Chelsea and Royal Worcester porcelain and to have acquired some good Sung period pots from China. According to a recent report in The Times, Mr. Heath bought some of his Chinese pieces during a trip to the Far East.

It would be hard to find so good a symbol of the visitor who is expected at the fair: The respectable Briton, with a cultivated mind, wishing to buy some "decent stuff" of unquestionable genuineness to add charm to his home.

A Question

The question remains: Does one have to hold a fair to offer such buyers what they are looking for? This perfectly respectable wish, which many people including this reporter share, may be just as easily satisfied by browsing about the many antique shops in the English countryside. It is no less pleasant and definitely much

If, on the other hand, the dealers' aim is to advertise their own image, one somehow feels that they haven't done a very good job. Wartski, at 138 Regent Street, is one of the greatest sliver dealers in the world. But the William III tankard by Hugh Roberts admittedly a delightful object—that Wartski bad but in the catalogue to the fair hardly conveys the idea of the firm's standing. A better illustration of what Wartski's is all about would have been the admirable David-Well platter that the firm reportedly bought In Paris last week (the Orleans platter, IHT, June 5-6). It was not on display at the stand. Perhaps, it had not cleared customs. But even so, surely Wartski can produce something just as glamorous from its vast stores. And so could have all his famous colleagues in their respective fields,

Apparently some of the leading dealers were beginning to get this feeling yesterday. Francis Schuster, public relations consultant to the fair committee, said that they were definitely thinking of a very different kind of layout for next year. He also wishes to see the fair internationalized. Several dealers, it seems to me, would welcome the idea.

These second thoughts are more remarkable as commercially speaking, the fair, so far (it continues through June 24) is an unmitigated success. Attendance, by yesterday, was 10 percent higher than it had been last year. Yesterday, Spink's ennounced that 30 percent of their furniture on display had been sold. Charles Toller, a firm specializing in country oak furniture, said most of its furniture was sold on opening day.

Most significant, however, was Hugh Moss's statement: On opening day he did 250,000 worth of business and sold all his Tang pieces. It must be emphasized that this was largely due to the presence of Japanese dealers and also museum curators from all over the world here for the opening of the Oriental Ceramic Society's exhibition of Chinese wares at the Victoria and Albert Museum.

Sideline

Also, the extraordinary sale of Lord Cumliffe's unique collection of 50 Chinese pieces at Bluett's, the day before, helped create a buying climate. Bluett's opened their doors to buyers at 2:30 p.m. At 2:45, 40 pieces had been sold. Collectors had started queuing up the day before at 10 p.m. and some had hired students to stand in line in their stead. When the doors were opened, the clients dashed madly in since the first man who got hold of the label was entitled to huy the object. There was even a scuffle between two wellknown respectable huyers, one of whom fell head first on the floor.

Such incidents certainly helped to focus attention on Chinese wares and must have had a bearing on Hugh Moss's and Bluett's successes in that same field at the fair. Nonethcless, they wouldn't have had that sort of success if the quality of their Chinese pieces had not been outstanding. Nor would they have had it without the presence of the foreign dealers.

This year the symbol of the fair was a blue and white English punch bowl inscribed "True Blue For Ever—1819" which was presented to Mr. Heath by Grosvenor House to commemorate his opening of the fair. My guess-and hope-is that next year there will be far less of the True Blue atmosphere about the whole show.

For her first London show, the South African artist Gill Wiles has chosen a vast range of paintings and sculpture for exhibition the most part of it concerned with horses. The painting is the more interesting, to my mind, the further it reaches towards fan. tasy, as it does in "Heads of ss" and one or two of the ink sketches. The sculpture is alto-gether more important, and shows great feeling for and knowledge of the animals she portrays. Apart from several lovely horse bronzes, the giraffes, the lioness, and the charging rhinoceros are especially good.

Comment-

In reviewing the exhibition of prints and drawings by François Boucher (IBF, May 22-23), now at the Cabinet des Dessins of the Louvre, your critic, Michael Gibson; appears to have com-pletely missed the point and purpose of the exhibition. To characterize Boucher as "an elegant and facile draftsman and a fashionable decorator whose works are on the whole graceful and insipid froth" is to repeat, in a facile and insipid manner the outworn cliches long since abandoned by art historians. This is the first time that a substantial part of the famous Edmond de Rothechild collection especially rich in French prints of the 18th century, has been shown in public. For, although it was given to the Louvre some 35 years ago and has been known to scholars throughout the world its vast holdings over 40,000 prints and 3,000 drawings-have thus far not been easily accessible. An ensemble of 105 choice impressions, selected from no less than 1,250 prints after Boucher's works, can therefore hardly be considered "lacking in interest" for anyone with even the most superficial knowledge of the graphic arts

The continued popularity of Boucher's work was, in a sense, responsible for the reaction in the 19th century, which gave rise to opinions such as those voiced our critic; for Boucher's drawings have been copied, imitated, counterproofed and forged -and consequently weakened. and vulgarized ad nauseam, for the past 200 years. Since no satisfactory catalogue raisonné exists which shows the foll range of his draftsmanship, there are no adequate standards hy which to judge him.

The paintings which Mr. Gibson dismisses condescendingly—the mysterious, luminous landscapes in the Hermitage, the Louvre, the Munich Pingkothek; the great mythological cycles in the Wallace Collection, the Hotel de Soubise, the Musee dc Tours, the California Palace, the pastorals in the Metropolitan and Boston museums; the portraits in Washington and Edinburgh—are these really no more than "fashionable decoration"? I once showed a photograph of an enlarged detail the head of a young woman from the "Three Graces" (in the Gulbenidan Foundation), to a young art historian and asked him if he recognized the artist. After examining the brushwork carefully, he said. 'Renoir of course." Renoir did, in fact, copy Boucher, as did Berthe Morisot and other 19th-century artists whose stylistic development is inconceivable without the background of 18th-century painting.

Promise on Vietnam?

Something of real significance may be happening in respect to Vietnam. Shifts by domestic war critics and by Hanoi in recent days seem to have brought them, separately, somewhat closer to political hailing distance of President Nixon. As a result, one can see how it might be possible to end quickly at least the American combat role in the war -if Mr. Nixon were to respond in turn.

The domestic critice have moved on two froms, prisiners-of-war and post-withdrawal aid. Both the McGovern-Hatfleid amendment in the Senate and the Nedzi-Whelan amendment in the House condition the final withdrawal of troops on a return of the prisoners. The peace plan offered by Clark Clifford would have Hanoi release our POWs 30 days after a withdrawal date was proclaimed. We happen to believe that a formula providing for parallel troop withdrawale and prisoner release-carried out step by step in tandem—has the best chance of overcoming the massive mutual distrust that plainly exists. But the main point is: All responsible crities share the President's insistence on release of the prisoners before the last of our troops leave.

Similarly, we believe all responsible critics -and this is the eccond standard by which we would define "responsible"-are prepared to see the United States offer aid to Saigon after American participation in combat ends. McGovern-Hatfield would let the President "provide assistance to the nations of Indochina, in amounts approved by the Congress..." Nedzi-Wholan, in like language, would let him provide "military and oconomic assistance." It is simply false to charge that the critics would do nothing at all to help South Viotnam after we have disengaged militarily from the war. Assuredly, most critics do not share Mr. Nixon's partiality for the Thieu regime. Bot knowing that in South Vietnam the United States has created a governmental and military machine that cannot concelvably operate without American aid, they prepared to countenance that

Let os torn to the nuances in the interview given our correspondent Chalmers Roberts this week by North Vietnam's representative in Paris, Xuan Thuy. For prisoner release to be arranged, said Xuan Thuy, the United States must set a date for withdrawal of "all" its forces in Indochina—this would include advisers and a residual force and it would preclude combat missions by air or naval units based in Thalland or on the high seas. This would leave no American military men "In or over" Indochina. as American critics put it.

The Hanoi representative further said that removal of the Thieu-Ky regime and formation of a coalition government are not a condition for prisoner release. Finally, in his most significant statement, he pointedly refused to demand that the United States balt military and economic aid to Saigon, after withdrawal. Mr. Roberts repeatedly tried to pin him down on the question and Yuan Thoy repeatedly hedged.

What may all this add up to? At home, it now is clear that if Mr. Nixon were willing to set a withdrawal date, he could have the support of domestic critics-that is to say. he could unite the country-on retrieving the prisoners and on providing some form of post-withdrawal aid for Saigon. The resultant advantages to him in bargaining with Hanol could be immense, since Hanoi would no longer be able to play on divisions within the American body politic.

Furthormore, since it appears that Hanoi prepared under certain conditions to lot Thico stay in office and to have Thico receive American military and economic aid. then it means Mr. Nixon could set a withdrawal date without doing what he has always said he will never do-bug out on Thieu. By aid, though not by further combat support, be could give the Sooth Vietnamese that "reasonable chance" of saving themselves which he has consistently cited as his prime war aim. It would be silly, of course, to conciude that Hanoi has become resigned to Thien's continued rule. A safe conclusion is that North Vietnam is so eager to pry the United States out of the war that it is willing to take its chances in a strugglo or -who knows in an accommodation with barriers which have prevented any sig- is no indication that the Chinese have the nificant Chinese-American trade since the hotel accommodations, the interpreters and Truman administration. In the short run. this step has far more political than economic significance, and it represents a logical advance as the Chinese People's Republic and the United States move toward normal relations. Two months ago Peking opened its borders to American visitors, and now President Nixon has openod American doors to a wide variety of goods that may be exported to or imported from Chins.

· This is, in short, a promising moment. It is a moment for the broadest vision and statesmanship on the part of President Nixon. He could lose it by continuing to throw political sand in the eyes of his domestic critics; they, too, have their own responsibility. He could lose it by clinging unnecessarily tightly to Mr. Thieu. Now that a foundation for post-withdrawal aid to South Vietnam seems to be hardening, there is much less reason to fear that an American move in advance of the Vietnamese elections next October would demoralize Saigon. And he could lose it by a continuing show of indifference, if not outright antipathy, to any sign, however much limited to nuances, of evolution in the position of-THE WASHINGTON POST.

Since the Chinese are able to buy almost any commercial prodoct they want from Japan and Western Europe, there is little reason for the United States to expect any great rush of Chinese orders in the near futore. Similarly, there are comparatively few prodocts that China exports that are in demand in the United States. There may be 800 million potential Chinese customers, bot they have limited resources to spend on imports, and opening the American market to Chinese products is unlikely to add much immediately to Peking's foreign eurrency hoidings.

Substantial growth in Chinese-American economic relations in the years immediately ahead wili require bold political decisions in both Peking and Washnigton. The Chinese. for example, could earn many millions of American dollars by opening their doors wide to visitors from the United States. But any soch mass influx of affloent Americans might have an unsettling effect on China's

President Nixon ended Thursday the legal present austere atmosphere. Moreover, there . other ancillary facilities and personnel required to meet the needs of American > Alternatively, Washington might open the way for a massive infusion of American capital and technological expertise into the still relatively small and slow Chineso indostrialization effort. This would require an end to existing legal barriers to loans to China and the encouragement of private American corporations to advance credits. Large-scale economic aid to Chinese development would worsen, for the near future, America's already unsatisfactory balance-ofpayments situation. The prospect for major commercial and financial interchange is therefore probably slight until after American forces are oot of Vietnam and after there is substantial improvement in U.S. foreign accounts.

But the fact that such prospects can even be discussed now is eloquent indication of the positive, though still limited, improvement President Nixon has won in Chineso-American relations. Now Peking could reciprocate by renewing the direct Chinese-American discussions broken off in Warsew early last year: and it could also send some Chinese athletes, journalists and scientists to the United States, If Peking should choose to send businessmen interested in initiating commercial exchanges, they, too, would be welcome.

Ending the Tragedy

The tragedy of the refugees can be ended only when conditions are secured in East Pakistan euch as to bring about, first, a cassation of the flood, and secondly the return of those who have come out. Nothing would be more likely to assist in securing such conditions, which would necessarily entail a return to civilian rule, than to reopen the country to impartial observers from friendly nations like Britain and America, Without that, the question is inevitably asked: what ie going on in there? The Indian government Thursday put the total of refugees at over five million and forecast that they could reach eight million. The great majority are Hindus, clearly fleeing in terror, whether justified we cannot tell but clearly roal enough for them. It is time for President Yahya to get his troops back to barracks and open his frontiers to the world and the aid it is eager to offer.

WASHINGTON. - In his life- raising falso hopes on the prislong study of the art of diplomacy. Sir Harold Nicholson reached the conclusion that imprecision of language was one of the greatest barriers to successful negotiation between nations. This is proving to be true once more in the Paris talks on Vietnam. Scarcely a day goes by without some official bere in Washington assuring the American people that the U.S. is "withdrawing" its troops from South Vietnam, or without some official on the other side demanding that we set a date for "withdrawal." But the more they talk, the more vague the meaning of "withdraw" be-

One day officials here talk about withdrawing "all American troops" from Vietnam and occasionally "from Indochina," which is not the same thing. Another day, they speak of withdrawing ground troops" from Vietnam, which could mean leaving the Air Force and the aircraft earriers behind.

Similarly, the North Vietnamese and Liberation Front officials are masters of the art of obscuring their meaning behind ambiguous language, for when they demand that the United States announce "a date certain for withdrawal" it is never clear whother they mean withdraw all American troops physically from Vietnam and/or Laos and Cambodia, or whether they mean "withdraw" all military and economic aid from Saigon as well.

Guessing Game

The result is that we are all left to guess at the intentions of the negotiators, and the tragedy of it is that the prisoners of war and their anxious families are caught in this thicket of twofaced words.

Here, for example, is President Nixon saying in his last news conference: "It always comes back to the same thing. If we end our involvement in Vietnam [another and more sweeping phrasal and discuss prisoners not release

On the other hand, here is former Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford putting forward a more precise plan to "end our participation in the war cleanly and permanently" and adding that he has reason to believe his plan would be accepted by the other side. He is at least precise in his proposals:

"The United States," he says, would agree to: (1) withdraw all U.S. military personnel from South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia by December 31, 1971; (2) end all ground, air and naval activity by U.S. forces in South Victuam, North Victuam, Laos and Cambodia by the same date. "North Vietnam and the National Liberation Front would agree to: (1) return all U.S. prisoners, held by North Vietnam and the NLF, within 30 days from the date of the joint announcemeet by Hanoi and Washington of this egreement; (2) refrain from attacks that would threaten the safety of U.S. military personnel during the period of withdrawal."

He Is Criticized

Clifford added that he believed language could also be agreed upon that would provide for no reprisals during or after tho period of disengagement, but instead of being asked to prove his point, he was accused by the White House spokesman of playing politics with the war and

President Nixon has made no public statement on the disaster since it began three months ago, with the intervention of Paki-stani troops in Bast Pakistan, but then no reporter has eaked a question on the subject at a press conference.

Why? The United States does not have Britain's historical relationship with India, but that is not a sufficient answer. Americans have traditionally been generous in helping at times of great human disaster, whatever the historical or political context.

'The Turning Impard'

A major reason must be Vietnam-the wounding effect of the war on American attitudes toward the world. "It is part of the turning inward after Victism," a wise U.S. official said of the limited public reaction to the Pakisten disaster.

Looking at it another way, the present episode shows the distor-tion in American values that has occurred because of Vietnam, the disproportion in our weighing of political and human interests. If our sense of proportion were more balanced, how would wo compare our relative interest in South Vietnam and India?

WASHINGTON. - Increasing W talk at high Republican levels that Vice-President Spiro Agnew may bow off the 1972 Republican presidential ticket has its source not among Agnewhaters but in the bosom of the Vice-President's political family. Two of Agnew's intimates-Stanley Blair, top vice-presi-

The price was well below the central bank's previous lowest selling level of 8.5103 DM on Wednesday, and was also below today's official fixing of 3.5096 All the sales were during the fternoon. In the morning the bank declined to sell any dollars and even rejected an offer from one bank to pay 3.5150 DM,

WASHINGTON, June 11 (WP) .- The Nixon administration, which last year at this time put aside its worries about inflation to concentrate on expanding the economy, has been seized with second thoughts.

In spice of its efforts to stimulate economie growth, actual recovery has been small, unemployment has grown-and there is a gnawing swelling of the money supply so far this year will promote a new inflationary spiral.

A leading administration policymaker, asked if his boss is not beading soon toward the point when he might have to substitute a new fiscal stimulus, to replace a softened monetary push, responds:

"I would say it's precisely the reverse." His rationale is that "there is already a tremendous fiscal stimulus arising from our huge budget deficits." For the current fiscal year ending June 30, ha says, the hudget deficit will be "substantially" in excess of $20 hillion, and the prospect for the 1972 fiscal year is for a deficit of the same dimensions.

The original estimate for fiscal 1972 red ink was $11.5 billion. Liberalization of social security programs and recent congressional action on military pay and on education bills means that even before the new year begins, the deficit is at least $18 billion. Then, allowances have to be made for slippage in receipts, according to Nixon advisers (a confession that the $1,065 billion Gross National Product (GNP) estimate for the year can be laid to rest.

"Those people who insist we need more fiscal stimulus," a high White House official says, "just aren't abreast of what's been happening to the budget. It's big, and it grows, and it's difficult to do anything about it. "Therefore our policy on any new stimulation should be wait and see."

This will disappoint those who think the time has come to slow reliance on monetary growth, and return to an emphasis on tax stimulants.

Mr. Nixon could in fact change his mind shortly. His principal advisers are now shaping up a mid-year economic review for presentation in early July. This will lay out the broad options of policy, and much will depend, as Mr. Nixon has said before, on the secondquarter results. Despite a pick-up in retail sales in April and May, there are early and worrisome "horse-back" guesses on the second-quarter

It rose at an annual rate of $31 billion in the first quarter, goosed by a recovery from the General Motors strike. But with that impetus past, there has been little zip. Some economists estimate that the second quarter rate of gain will not top $20 billion (and there are some guesses in the $17 to $19-billion range).

The "wait and see" resolve of the moment, officials hint, would be washed away by a gain of less than $20 billion. That would imply. as well, unemployment continuing to run over 8 percent, which cannot be entirely rationalized by the explanation that the labor force is showing a "phenomenal" increase or hlamed on the demobilization of Vietnam veterans. Emergency Tax Package

In that case, the administration could work up an emergency package that would include a speed-up of the personal income tax cuts al-ready on-line for 1972 and 1873, and relax its opposition to some form of public service jobs. Fears of inflation-which are real in the face of massive government deficits and the extraordinary increase in money supply (whose full effects may not be felt until late this year and early next; -could be tempered by a realistle wage-price restraint program At a meeting last week of the top government advisers, there was less visible resistance to some form of "incomes policy." Treasury Secretary John B. Connally and economic council chairman Paul W. McCracken are more open-minded now on the subject. U.S. Plans One Agency to Sell Securities

13% Annually

Growth in 3 Months Far Over Fed Target

By H. Erich Heinemann NEW YORK, June 11 (NYT) -The headlong monetary expansion, which has been deeply troubling to Wall Street recently. continued unabated during the last two weeks

Figures published yesterday by the Federal Reserve showed that the money supply increased at on annual rate of 13.3 percent in the last three months, far abovo the g percent growth rate that is presumed to be the Pederal Reserve System's current target.

Other monetary aggregates, which measure the availability of funds in the economy, showed similarly rapid rates of expansion. The monetary base, total reserves of member banks, and the money supply plus commercial bank time deposits all posted annual growth rates over the last quarter of 10 percent or better.

Citibank Warning

According to A. James Melgs, vice-president and economist of First National City Bank, if this rate of money growth should con-tinue, new inflationary pressures will follow.

During the week ended Wednesday, the Fed reduced fts holdings of marketable securities by more than $900 million, . move that was widely interpreted at the time as action by the money managers to tighten the market, and thus slow the growth of the money

However, yesterdey's report showed that there were other motivations behind the action, as

Soviet Union Plans Nation's Largest Iron, Steel Plant

MOSCOW, June 11 (NYT),-The Soviet Union announced this week it plans to build up the nation's largest iron and steel plant in the heart of European Russia near the principal metal markets.

The decision to transform an existing mill in the central Russian city of Lipetak into the Soviet Union's biggest steel producer was disclosed in a Tass dispatch, which said work had started on a huge oxygen converter complex that would ultimately produce up to ten million metric tons of steel ingots a year.

The Lipetak plant already yields about 4 million tons of steel under an expansion program begun in the late 1950s.

The addition of the new complex, expected to be completed by the late 1970s, would rank the mill's total output shead of the Magnitogorsk plant in the Urals long the leader of the Soviet steel industry, now producing about 12 million tons a year. Tass said Lipetsk had been selected as the site of one of three gigantie blast furnaces whose construction is scheduled to begin in a few years.

These furnsees, with a working volume of 175,000 cubic feet and a yearly capacity of 4 million mertic tons of pig iron, would be the largest such production units in the world. Pig tron is the intermediate product in the steel-making process between iron ore and steel. The largest present blast furnace in the Soviet Union is a smaller. The largest, at Bethiehem Steel Corp's plant at Burns Harbor, Ind., has a working volume of 86,000 cubic feet.

If these Porsches were to fall, then the Ferraris or a non-team Porsche would have the next best shot at showing the crowd of 500,000 that they have the most endurable car.

The Strategy

The strategy of the drivers should become evident during the first few laps around the 13.469-kilometer circuit. For the Wyer side, the No. I drivers are Jo Siffert, of Switzerland, Richard Attwood, of Britain, who won last year with Hans Herrmann, and Pedro Rodriguez, of Mexico, whom many drivers tab as this year's favorite. This will be Rodrigues's 14th time at Le Mans. He won in a Ford in

Driving for Martini are Helmut Marko, of Austria, Willibert Kauhsen, of West Germany, and Efford of Britain, who during the last two years posted the best lap time here, but didn't finish either race. Elford, like Rodriguez, has trouble controlling his speed in endurance races. For the last two years, Siffert and Elford dueled for the lead "and neither of us has been around at the finish," Elford said. "It looks like a grand prix at the start."

Elford said one reason there is a rivalry is that the Wyer Team gets the first Porsches from their experimental factory.

Elford said he will try to control himself tomorrow and stay in third place in the race and hope that two members of the Wyer Team—Siffert and Rodriguez-run out of endurance, Siffert and Rodriguez are also grandprix drivers and have announced it is hard for them to control their speed. Rodrigues also said he will see how the race goes and possibly stay third. Siffert didn't talk much yesterday as he was a bit shaken up from a mishap during trials. A non-team Porsche cut him off, the cars bumped and Siffert's Porsche went into two spins and hit a guard rail Neither driver nor car was damaged.

The Advantage

Rodriguez will have the advantage of starting from the front of the 55-car pack as he had the fastest qualifying time, 3 minutes -13.9 seconds for an average of 250,069 kilometers an hour. Elford's Porsche was next best, with 3:14.9 for 248.786.

The start will be changed for the third straight year. The drivers' running-to-the-car start was replaced last year by the drivers sitting in their cars with engines shut. This year it is an Indianapolis dash-type start with the cars doing a lap before getting the starting flag.

The top Ferrari time was 3:16.5, by Mark Donohue of Media, Pa., and David Hobbs of Britain. There are only two Lolas, one-Alpine and no Alfa Romeos and race director Steinemann said. "It's a pity they're not here. If they were, this race would be more valuable." Other car companies will be saying that about the factory Porsches next year.

Can-Am to Begin BOWMANVILLE, Ontario, June 11 (Reuters). — New Zealander Denny Hulme and U.S. driver Peter Revson will attempt to maintain the dominance of Mclaren cars in the Can-Am racing series, which opens here on Sunday. The Team McLaren has won the series, inaugurated in 1966, the last four years. The late Bruce McLaren won it in 1967 and 1969 and Hulme was the victor in 1968 and last year.

Jackie Stewart, of Scotland, the icading driver in this year's For-mula One standings and a former world champion, will drive a Lola in the series.

First in 20 Years

Marie-Claude Beaumont, 29, an unmarried and very pretty Frenchwoman, is the novelty of this year's 24 Hours of Le Mans. Yesterday, she qualified to become the first woman pilot here in 20 years. She is expected to add to the glamour of an event which is glamorous enough to attract close to a half-million spectators.

Miss Beaumont, though, is not here to win a beanty contest but to capture the world's most prestigious endurance race for sports cars and prototypes. She has had success driving in auto rallies, has driven in the 34 Hours of Spa in Belgium and this year did well in the 1,000 Kilometers of Paris. She "was invited by the French team to drive here," she said,

And so, for 24 hours or as long as her Chevvy lasts, she will drive for the Greder racing team, alternating at the wheel with Henri Greder. Unfortunately for the cameramen, Miss Beaumont will not drive in hot pants, nor in a Cardin-designed white uniform, nor will she even walk around the city of Le Mans in anything resembling a super-chic outfit.

The New Fashion

"I like the new fashion shorts, but I can't wear them here," the blonde sold. "I must be very careful what I do. All the photographere will want to take pictures of my

"I work hard when I drive. I must be serious. I want to be a driver.

'Service the Cars' Miss Beaumont's life in cars began in her hometown of Gap, in the French Alps, a place more famous for producing petite skiers. But her brother was an euto dealer, and drivers would come up to her brother's garage "and I would service the cars." She became a full-fledged pilot five years ago.

Now she has reached Le Mans, where there have been 45 women entrants from 1930 to 1951 and none since. The best finish was a fourth by O. Silka in 1932 "No, it hasn't been my dream to race at Le Mans. To drive prototypes, yes, but not especially here." Miss Beaumont said. Yes, the blonde is certainly different from all of the other drivers here.

The Boyer Case Makes Kuhn 2 for 2

By Shirley Povich WASHINGTON, June 11 (WP).

Eowie Kuhn, the baseball commissioner, has struck again, and as clumsily as the last time. On that occasion, Kulm chose to disregard pitcher Denny McLain's own testimony that he had been a nectner to a bookie operation to Michigan but did suspend him for involvement as an unaware victim of his bookle pals. First time a player's confession was ever rejected as inadmissible evidence by a baseball commis-

The commissioner handed down resterday his latest ruling, on what can be called the Clete Boyer case, and there are many who will choose to believe Knhn is now two for two, and that there never should have been a Clete Boyer case in terms of action by the commissioner.

Kuhn, it seems, discovered that back in 1968-69, third baseman Boyer, recently released by the Atlanta Braves, had made some football bets. Big deal, By some curlous logic, Kuhn decided that

The other truth is that the charge against Boyer, and his fine, constitutes a stigma, nevertheless, because of the mere association of words like games and betting. In the framework of baseball's honored purity through the years, any suggestion of hanky-panky in the game is regarded as only slightly less contemptible than rape, and Boyer appears an innocent victim of

That Boyer, a baseball player,

Cash Carries Tigers' Clout For 2d in Row Over Brewers

Norm Cash delivered his second game-winning hit in a row, blasting a two-run homer in the sixth inning to power the Detroit Tigers to a 3-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers last night.

The slugger, who beat Mil-wankee with a three-rum homer Wednesday night, ripped his 13th circuit shot of the year off loser Skip Lockwood, 3-5, to wipe out a 2-1 Brewer lead. The blast tied him for second place on the all-time Tiger home run list with Hank Greenberg at 310. Al Kaline is the career leader.

Joe Coleman, 6-2, tamed Milwaukee on five hits as the Brewers lost their seventh straight game.

Coleman gave up a two-run homer to Bill Voss in the fourth inning following a leadoff double by Johnny Briggs.

The Tigers had scored in the second on a single by Mickey Stanley and Bill Freehan's triple.

Orioles 12, Twins 0 Frank Robinson drove in five runs with a homer and two singles and Jim Palmer scored his ninth victory of the season as Baltimore routed Minnesota, 12-0, for its eighth consecutive triumph. hearts in this country are draw in front of a mirror. starting to scream again for the registration of handguns or the licensing of their owners.

Fortunately for those of us who love guns the Nixon administration has rejected any leg-islation that would offend the gun lobbies m this country. The suggestion by the National Commission on the Reform of Criminal Laws Buchwald to ban the possession of handguns by all except the police has been rejected by the President and the attorney general as politically unsound. But despite this, the anti-gun people persist in wanting to disarm the nation.

Wallaby Hornblower, chief lobbyist for the National Cheap Handgun Association, is not concerned about the recent bad publicity that handguns are getting.

"We go through this nonsense every few years," Wallaby told me. "But America will never give up its bandguns."

"Thank God for that," I said.

"The trouble with the media is that they're always writing about the bad things a handgun does. When a cop gets shot with a bandgun, they put it on the front page-or when some bank gets held up they play it up big if a sun is used. But you never see the good stories about handguns or read about the pleasure they give people."

"I'll say you don't." I agreed. "The newspapers never write about the fun people have at target practice or shooting rab-

'Because it's not news," Wallaby said. 'Do you know for every person who uses a handgum in a robbery, there are a thousand gun owners who have never shot anybody?"

"Yet you never hear about them," I said in disgust. * * *

"But." said Wallaby, chuckling, "the United States will never ban the handgan."

"How can you be that sure?"
"Because." he said, "the gun is a sex symbol."

"Most American meu who own handguns have virility problems. The gun is an extension of their oranhood. If you take the gun away from a man in this coun-try, you're emasculating him." "I never thought of that," I said. "But it's true."

"The beautiful thing about it is that they don't know it. Most gun owners will fight any legislation because they think it's unconstitutional or an invasion of their property rights.

"But subconsciously what they really fear is impotence. When you ask someone to register his gun, you're really asking him to register his manhood."

"It's like trying to get people to buy a license for sex." I said. "Exactly. Those of us in the business have known this for years. You don't think gun registration would be such an emotional issue if sex weren't involved. do you?"

wonder you're so relaxed about Congress not passing any strong gun legislation."

"Every American child. from the day he can watch Westerns on talevision, knows that guns and virility go together, and you can't have one without the other. So when you telk about disarming the people in this country, you're dealing with a Freudian problem, which no gun owner will face up to."

"Then what you're saying is if we have to choose between crime and protecting the American male's manhood, we'd rather put un with the crime."

Wallaby smiled. "You said it.

Pablo Neruda: The Poetry of Diplomacy

By James Goldsborough

PARIS, June 11 (IHT) .- The Allende I government went to get poet Pablo Neruda at his Chilean seaside home of Isia Negra and asked him to be ambaseador to France. He wouldn't have accepted any other post. "I am a poet. I have no difficulties being a poet. I have some being an ambassador." For a poet, it is easier to be an ambassador in Paris.

Neruda, 66, Lenin Prize winner, perennial Nobel candidate, Marxist, diplomat, his country's most celebrated poet, strides about his office and mixes his two worlds. Ou the walls hang pictures of Chilean President Salvador Allende and Chilean primitives. The books are half poetry. half politics. He claims the poet-diplomat is in his country's tradition, and no fewer than five current ambassadors are men

His conversation weaves the two worlds together. Yet the visitor who comes slightly apprehensive of a thing so exotic as Marxist poetry soon is at ease. Some Communist allusions will creep in. He has written poems to Stalin, with paean becoming odium after 1956 and de Stalinization, but little of this gets in his speech. "I am not sure I am a Marrist," he con-"A Marxist has a clear, scientific view of society." 'How could a poet?

He is a thick, bronzed man, born in tha forest and volcano country of southern Chile. He is Chilean "in perpetuity." He bears some of the Latin American leftist's aggressivity toward the United States, yet still points out that the only photo in the bedroom of his Paris spartment is that of Walt Whitman. He certainly thinks of himself as his own country's Whitman, singing the song of the Chilean revolution. He appears to like André Malraux, and smiled when a visitor suggested that the title for his collection "Estravagario" was as obscure as Malraux's "Antimémoires."

History

For Neruda, the Latin American condition-fascists, dictators, generals and juntas can be traced to the 16th-century conquistadores. They spread the seed of conquest and power, he says, and if Chile escaped the worst of it, it was likely due to Chilean isolation "in the South Pole regions."

He personally can speak of 45 years of leftist militancy, which came into its sharpest focus during the Spanish Civil War. Neruda was his country's consul in Madrid, and later headed an organization in Paris that resettled over 4,000 Republican refugees in Chile. He still has photos

It took a great effort for me to abandon obscurity for clarity...

I have decided that each day I shall be more simple in my new poems...

taken before the fall of Madrid with the last of the great Spanish poets, Rafael Alberti, Miguel Hernandez, Federico Garcia Lorca, and film director Luis Butuel.

He recalls one little-known incident which brought him into personal contact with Guernica, which before the Luftwaife bombing was just an unknown Basque hown in Vizcayz.

Four German aviators crashed during the bombing which was to inspire Picasso's painting, and the Chilean government was asked by Germany to intervene with the Republicans to obtain their return. It was obtained, and the aylators, who had completely destroyed the town, were returned safely to Germany. "I was against this," says Neruda. He said he did not know what kind of pressure Hitler brought on the Republicans, but that it probably had been a threat to declare war,

Tropical

Neruda paces the top floor of the Left Bank embassy in a white sports jacket that is tropical despite Paris weather which two days before had hit the lowest point on record since 1881. He is cautious when talking of his government's relations with the United States. Chile will nationalize its natural wealth. This was expected. But we will resolve this with agreements and with just payments." He points out that it is not a "socialist" government, but a "pluralist" one. It is a revolution but it is mixed with traditionalism. "We are a people of order and legality."

Chile's influence on the military governments which surround it? "Now we want to work in peace. Wa don't know if the others can learn. We want to work but are not interested in exporting our thoughts or our revolution. We have too much to do. And we are too modest."

Translation

Neruda, perhaps because he is the new ambassador bere and has been mentioned repeatedly in recent years as a Nobel Prize candidate, is undergoing a vogue in France. "Estravagario" was just translated here as "Vaguedivague," which also is nonsense, and Le Monde did a takeout on his enormous collected works early last year. The respect is mutual. The Chilean points out that Paris has always been the home for Latin American poets, and that is why he accepted his present post. "France is different," he says, "It is something too important for me, my country and the Spanish language."

He probably best described his own goal in a recent speech at a congress of South American writers:

"It took a great effort for me to abandon obscurity for clarity, because obscurity in language had become among us the privilege of the literary class, and class prejudice had condemned popular expression and the simplicity of folk poetry... I have decided that each day I shall be more simple in my new poems."

Walt Disney films, and Reg Boulting, 57-year-old movie director, were married at their summer home in Cap d'Ail on the French Riviera carlier this week, the couple disclosed in London. And why had they decided to get married now after living together for the past four years? "We both felt we had known each other long enough to be sure and we were convinced that it was the right thing to do," said the 25year-old actress. Said Boulting: There is a considerable disparity between my age and Hayley's and I thought it would have been most unfair to act hastily." 17 - 4 * 4 15 15 15

A police bomb disposal squad rushed to studios of the British Broadcasting Corp. Thursday evening after arrival of a parce addressed to ex-Beatle Paul Mc-Cartney. BBC officials said they had "good reason" to suspect the package might contain a bomb. Police put the package on a table surrounded by sandbags. An expert then opened it with painstaking care—only to find several pieces of china and a note written in Spanish from a girl named Lils. It said: Happy birthday-I love you.
